FACULTY POSITION
COLLEGE OF ENVIRONMENT AND DESIGN
THE UNIVERSITY OF GEORGIA

The College of Environment and Design at the University of Georgia invites applications for a tenure-track faculty position at the rank of Assistant or Associate Professor beginning in August 2011. The selected candidate will be expected to teach in the undergraduate and graduate programs of the College, pursue scholarly research, and provide service to the community, the profession, and the University.

The University of Georgia’s College of Environment and Design houses accredited five-year BLA and three-year MLA programs, as well as a two-year Master of Historic Preservation program and a new Master of Environmental Planning and Design program. The College is home to the oldest landscape architecture program in the Southeast, and the largest program in the United States. There is a large and diverse faculty involved with a range of research interests, practice, and service activities. The BLA and MLA programs within the College consistently rank among the top programs in the U.S.

The College seeks outstanding individuals with the ability to teach courses that seamlessly integrate digital representation, augmented and virtual reality, advanced visualization, and geo-design (integrating geographic information science with landscape design) into the studio. The candidate should also be prepared to teach other courses in the landscape architecture program. In addition, the successful candidate will contribute to interdisciplinary and transdisciplinary activities by collaborating on projects that support the CED’s goal of integrating instruction with community engagement.

Candidates for the position should hold an appropriate terminal professional degree (MLA or MArch), or a doctorate in landscape architecture or a related field. Preference will be given to candidates possessing at least one professional degree in landscape architecture. An interest in teaching, research, and interdisciplinary collaboration is essential.

To apply, submit a letter of interest addressing areas of teaching and scholarly activity and/or creative work, a curriculum vitae, and four references with names, addresses, e-mail addresses, and phone numbers. Applicants with practice, creative, or scholarly experience should submit representative samples of their work. Those with teaching experience should submit samples of course syllabi, student work, and course evaluations. Send all application materials in hard copy format or Adobe PDF on disk or USB flash drive to:
